Written Question

Sarah Wollaston (Totnes, Conservative)

To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans she has for future numbers of front line police officers in England.

Nick Herbert (Minister of State, Justice)

It is for chief constables and their police authorities to make decisions on the number of police officers within their available resource. The Government believe that forces can make savings while maintaining or improving the service they provide to the public.

They Work For You

Hansard